Demonstrations

In order to demonstrate the equipment effectively it need to be demonstrated over a period of time.

Therefore MajorFacts have a demonstration plan to work with you for an effective demonstration process.

We then will supply the demonstration equipment hardware on a short-term contract to you and arrange to have it installed on your equipment. We will then set up a short-term airtime & software agreement for the period of the trial.

Once the demonstration is up and running a member of MajorFacts will work with you so that you can understand the reports that are available to you. We will visit at pre arranged intervals to assist you to pull off any reports that are required.

Firstly we will carry out a consultation to find out about the equipment that it is to be fitted to and the site it will be operated on.

We will then collect all the information for the reporting process such as equipment details, fleet numbers, and operator's information.

The next stage is to go to site to carry out a full site survey. This will ensure that we select the correct airtime supplier for that particular site.

When the demonstration period has been completed. We will discuss with you the major benefits of the system and the information that was collected from it. We will help you analyse the information so that you can use this for the benefit of your business.
